

PAUL HUBER

Goes to work every day with one mission: Assist Veterans in need.

Serving in the Wisconsin Army National Guard and being deployed to Iraq, Huber's experiences haven't only prepared him with a certain mentality, but his service helps him bond with and gain the trust of Veterans in need suffering from mental health or substance abuse issues.

“As a young child, I would go to my father’s medical appointment with him at the VA Medical Clinics, which helped me learn very quickly the sacrifices that these Veterans made for us and our country... As a Veteran who served in Iraq, I want to make sure that we assist fellow Vets to get the help they may need.”

Paul Huber

Huber is the Region 4 coordinator of the Wisconsin Department of Veterans Affairs’ Veterans Outreach and Recovery Program. Coordinators like Huber work throughout the state to connect Veterans to community services, provide case management and support with a special focus on treatment and recovery. He has an office in Superior, but is rarely able to spend time in it. He spends his days working directly with Veterans throughout his region, which includes Douglas, Bayfield, Ashland, Iron, Burnett, Washburn, Sawyer, Polk, Barron, and Rusk counties.

Through the VORP, Veterans can receive crisis services in addition to on-the-street case management in order to get them treatment for mental health and/or substance abuse, including paying for private treatment. Collaboration is a key of Huber’s job, and he works closely with County Veterans Service Officers, Veteran service organizations, local government agencies, community nonprofits, and others, so that Veterans may also receive individualized wrap-around services such as housing, food, clothing, furniture, education, and employment.

“The VORP has become an integral part of our Veteran Service Office Team here in Douglas County by aiding us in providing additional resources to our Veterans who live here in rural northwestern Wisconsin,” Douglas County CVSO Brian Erickson said. “With the VORP’s assistance, we have prevented Veterans from becoming homeless and found shelter and homes for those who found themselves homeless. From housing and AODA recovery to gas cards, VORP has helped ensure a better life for Veterans in Douglas County and we are grateful for their continued support.”

A Marine and his wife, both who are in their 80s, contacted Huber for assistance after suffering issues with a well inside their home. Through collaboration between the WDVA and the Douglas County CVSO, the repair bill was paid in full. The result allowed the Veteran and his wife to continue living in their home, and she was able to continue baking bread and making jelly to gift to their neighbors.

The WDVA's Veterans Outreach and Recovery Program started out as a pilot program in 49 counties in 2014 and has since expanded to all 72 counties in Wisconsin. Since the program's inception, coordinators have helped hundreds of Veterans obtain mental health services, substance use disorder treatment and other supportive services.
